The dataset we use stems from the Bank of England Research datasets.

I quote:

Hello, this is bold and this is italic

This dataset contains the individual responses to our Inflation Attitudes Survey, a quarterly survey of people's feelings about inflation and other economic variables like the interest rate.

'comand + option + i' for the chunk to open

For this dataset the Bank of England asked 209.761 people for their opinion on the perceived and expected inflation. The survey has run quarterly since 2001.
